ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Results presented in this book have been obtained from the project ‘Youth, Unemployment, and Exclusion in Europe: A Multidimensional Approach to Understanding the Conditions and Prospects for Social and Political Integration of Young Unemployed’ (YOUNEX). This project was funded by the European Commission under the 7th Framework Programme (grant agreement no. 216122).⁷ The YOUNEX consortium was coordinated by the University of Geneva (Marco Giugni), and was formed, additionally, by the University of Siegen (Christian Lahusen), the Bocconi University (Simone Baglioni), the CEVIPOF-Sciences Po Paris (Manlio Cinalli), the University of Karlstad (Birgitta Eriksson) and the Polish Sociological Society (Slawomir Nowotny). Results on Portugal have been obtained independently from the YOUNEX project by the Technical University of Lisbon (Maria Vitória Mourão). We thank all the members of the YOUNEX research consortium for their contributions to the project. In addition to the authors who contributed to this volume, a number of other people have participated in the project: Ewa Bacia, Christophe Fay, Amanda Gavilanes, Paolo Graziano, Jennifer Hobbins, Jerzy Hołub, Eva-Maria Kolb, Lorenzo Mosca, Luís Mota, Maria Vitória Mourão, Anne Muxel, Natalia Schulz, Karolina Sztandar-Sztanderska, Lara Tavares and Maria Theiss.

NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

Simone Baglioni is Professor in Politics at the Yunus Centre for Social Business and Health, at Glasgow Caledonian University, Scotland. His research interests focus on unemployment and civil society issues. He has worked across several EU funded research projects, including YOUNEX. His more recent projects investigate social enterprises and social innovation (EFESEIIS and FAB-MOVE projects, both funded by the EU) and solidarity movements and civil society actions (TransSol, funded under the EU Horizon 2020 program).

Matteo Bassoli is Assistant Professor at eCampus University. As a member of the Research Centre on Multi-Level Integration and Governance Processes, he undertakes research on the functioning of private–public partnerships and their network structure, as well as on the social inclusion and political participation of deprived people.

Tuula Bergqvist is a senior lecturer in Working Life Science, at Karlstad Business School, Karlstad University, Sweden. Her research area is working life in general, including a special interest in attitudes to work in a relative sense, work–life balance, working conditions and unemployment.

Piotr Binder is Assistant Professor (Adiunkt) at the Institute of Philosophy and Sociology of the Polish Academy of Sciences in Warsaw, Poland. His academic interests include issues of poverty, local communities and rural areas as well as qualitative methods of social research (including CAQDAS).

Manlio Cinalli is Research Professor at CEVIPOF (CNRS—UMR 7048), Sciences Po Paris. He has delivered research and teaching in various leading universities and institutes across Europe and the USA, including Columbia University, the University of Oxford, the University of Geneva and the École Française de Rome. Drawing upon a comparative relational approach and multimethods research, he has published widely on citizenship, political integration, cultural cleavages and migration.

Didier Chabanet is Senior Lecturer at IDRAC Lyon and CEVIPOF-Sciences Po, Paris. He is also Research Associate at the Ecole Normale Supérieure, Lettres & Sciences Humaines in Lyon. He has established himself as a well-known international scholar in the field of social movements, collective action, social exclusion and in particular unemployment.

Marco Giugni is a Professor at the Department of Political Science and International Relations and Director of the Institute of Citizenship Studies (InCite) at the University of Geneva, Switzerland. His research interests include social movements and collective action, immigration and ethnic relations, unemployment and social exclusion.

Bettina Grimmer is postdoctoral researcher in sociology at Siegen University in Germany. Her research interests include political sociology and sociology of knowledge, sociology of administration, unemployment and qualitative research methods.

Christian Labusen is Professor of Sociology at Siegen University in Germany. His research is devoted to political sociology, social problems and the sociology of Europe and European integration. He is involved in international research consortia, and is currently the coordinator of the TransSOL research project (Horizon2020).

Jasmine Lorenzini is a research fellow at the European University Institute. She works on political conflict in the shadow of the Great Recession. She works on youth unemployment and citizenship with a focus on youth participation in social and political life. She is interested in the study of social and political inequalities.

Lara Monticelli is a Post-doc Research Fellow at Scuola Normale Superiore—Institute of Humanities and Social Sciences in Florence (Italy). Her research interests focus on sociology of work, political sociology, job precariousness, social and educational policies and political participation (with a particular focus on youth, non-conventional forms of political engagement and sustainability practices). She has worked as research fellow in two EU funded projects—YOUNEX (Youth, Unemployment, and Exclusion in Europe) and LOCALISE (Local Worlds of Social Cohesion).

Damien Richard is Assistant Professor at INSEEC Alpes-Savoie. His work deals with measure of subjective well-being in organizations and developing health management programs in public and private organizations.
